Thoroughly understanding the rigors of compulsory vaccination, and when the physician reached Miss Miller's residence she refused to let him apply the vaccine.

A case was made against her and she was fined $25 yesterday. She pleaded as an excuse that the operation would make her lose her living for a living for two children when a dead sister had left in her charge. She said she could not afford to pay the fine, and was sentenced to twenty-five days imprisonment in the city prison. When she had been there three hours she relented. She was then vaccinated and released.

ALARM RAISED BY A PARROT.

The Hackett It Made Led to the Discovery of a Thief.

New York, Dec. 18.—Policeman Taylor at 2:30 o'clock yesterday morning became suspicious of a "pigeon" coming from the back door of John Holt. Hastily drawing his night stick, and looking to see if his revolver was handy, Taylor entered the store, the door of which was open. He was met by another colored man, who was carrying a large cage on the floor, in which was a parrot, the gem of the Holt collection. The bird quivered after the policeman's appearance and chattered amicably in parrot fashion, when the policeman ordered the prisoner. Under a red in the room the policeman found Daniel O'Brien, twenty-six years old. He is held for burglary. But has raised the selling price of the parrot.

MINERS PANIC-STRIKEN

Starvation Already Reaches the Diggings at Dawson.

MANY FLEEING TO FT. YUKON

Arrival of Two Refugees in British Columbia—Their Story of the Trip Over 1,000 Miles of Mountains. Companions Killed by Cold and Starvation on the Road.

Victoria, B. C., Dec. 17.—Tidings brought in by the steamer Corona show a terrible condition of affairs at Dawson City. On the steamer were W. Kastner and George McLachlin, who left Dawson City on November 3.

Starvation was already there. The population was panic-stricken when Kastner and McLachlin undertook the hazardous trip—800 miles. What the condition is today can only be surmised.

Absolutely no food was on sale weeks before they left, and the whole town was living on half and quarter rations. Men who had food stores in their cellars had to sell it more carefully than they did their gold.

The eating-places were all closed before November 1, but there was an abundance of liquor to be found every where.

The peril of the situation is shown by the news that the two men being just before they left 800 miners accepted the offer of the Alaska Commercial Company and the Canadian government to supply them with food at Fort Yukon.

The 800 started in batches of thirty, forty, and fifty for Fort Yukon, which is about 600 miles to the northward, and just that much nearer the North Pole than Dawson City.

This journey is a frightful one, and of the 800 who started a large percentage will never reach the fort, for as few of them had enough food to last them through the journey. Kastner says it is impossible for them to make it, at the most, more than twenty miles a day, and if they take any average, it will be a marvel.

When Kastner left the temperature was between 60 and 70 degrees below zero, the cold being insupportable.

The 800 men are those who feared certain death from starvation in Dawson City, and who took the desperate chance of getting to Fort Yukon.

Kastner and McLachlin are Helena, Mont., men. They left in the company of P. K. Holland, George Roth and William King.

From Dawson City the party of five followed the broken trail along the bank of the Yukon river. It was impossible to navigate the latter on account of the ice jams.

They started with 400 pounds of provisions and bedding on sleds, but the burden of dragging the heavy load was too much for them. First they discarded the bedding, piece by piece, and when that was all gone they began to let the extra clothing go.

Their stock of food was small to begin with, and they were soon down to quarter rations. They were almost starving when they reached Lake Kelly, and were badly frostbitten as well.

At night they had to sleep out in the open, on top of pine around a fire. Their bedding and extra wrapping had been gone several days, and to avoid being frozen to death, one of the five stood guard and waked the others up every half hour, so that they could move about and keep the blood in circulation.

At Big Salmon they passed Major Walsh, of the Canadian relief expedition, who was in a bad way. He was waiting there for his dog teams to arrive from the north, and fresh supplies of provisions. Kastner said that the dog teams will never reach Major Walsh, and that neither he nor his party will ever get to Dawson City.

The failure of the dog teams to reach him, and the fact that the government officials to suffer from the want of food.

Mr. Freeman lost his life on Thanksgiving. He had gone ashore on a float and was returning to the boat when he was caught by a block of ice and was carried under it. The other occupants of the boat saved themselves, but Freeman was unable to reach shore.

Thirty-five miles below River Rapids Kastner says he met a party of five men endeavoring to travel down the river. They succeeded in reaching the opposite shore when the ice carried in and the open waters separated them from their three comrades and the provisions. There was no possibility of reaching the shore, and the men, and though Kastner does not know their fate, they probably perished in the ice. This happened on November 14.

In addition to the 800 men who left Dawson City, there were about 1,000 men in Dawson City who talked of making the journey as soon as the ice of the Yukon River became passable. There was not enough food in Dawson for one out of ten of the population.

Most of the men who decided to risk the trip to Fort Yukon were newcomers, who rushed into the gold district just before the open season ended. Not one out of thirty of these men brought in sufficient food to last through the winter.

On the Yukon, the men were divided into two parties. One party, led by Kastner and Weare left Dawson City for Fort Yukon, with the expectation of taking on several hundred tons of the provisions which had been stored there. The steamers managed to get to Fort Yukon, but they cannot return to Dawson City until the spring, on account of the ice.

A large proportion of the population of Dawson had counted on the supplies to be brought by these steamers. They were still expecting them when Kastner and McLachlin left.

In Dawson there are already men in the hospital, their sickness brought on by living on short rations. Kastner thinks there are enough provisions in Dawson for the present population. If they were only equally divided, but, unfortunately, some have plenty, while others have none. There are a few men who have three or four months' provisions laid in, but most of them will come out on the first ice, and have offered to bring a limited number of men at $1,000 each.

Starvation is certainly for many at Dawson, and many will perish along the trail, says Kastner. The steamers Bella and Weare had very small cargoes, the Bella, barely anything, and the Weare only twenty-five tons, and that mostly whisky and sugar. The supply of flour was nearly exhausted. It was sold by the companies at $12 a sack, while miners who have any to dispose of get from $10 to $15 a sack.

The condition of the men is such that this will also tend to lessen the output of gold, as they are very necessary to light the shafts while the men are working in the long Arctic night.

Dark Hunter Cleveland Ethelistic. Charleston, S. C., Dec. 18.—Grove Cleveland bagged twenty-nine ducks in two hours yesterday morning, and he said it was the finest sport he ever saw. Mr. Cleveland is still using the Government tender, the Water Lily. His party will leave on next Wednesday.

NEXT WEEK'S PLAYS.

The attraction at the National Theater for one week beginning Monday evening, December 20, is George H. Broadhurst's latest comedy success, "What Happened to Jones," which held the boards of the Bijou Theater, New York, during the past three months. One hundred and thirteen thousand four hundred and sixty people laughed at "Jones" during the Metropolitan engagement, and were it not for prior contracts made by the house management, Jones would not have left New York at all. As its title would indicate the play deals with a series of amusing situations and complications, which a good cast will interpret, among them several well-known Washington favorites: George C. Bonifay, Jr., George O'Brien, William Bernard, Reuben Frazar, J. W. Coleman, Harry Rose, Anna Belmont, Kathryn Osterman, Mattie Ferguson, Florence Robinson, Mrs. E. A. Eberle and Rose Stuart.

There is assurance of a festival of fun in the production of "A Hot Hot Time," the attraction of the Academy next week. The Kays, those talented and energetic comedians, whose rich comedy has so often pleased, are cast in parts which are as good as to show their capabilities as fun-makers to the very best advantage. They have surrounded themselves with a company, personating famous names, such as Marshall and Nelson, John C. Leach, Frank V. Lohr, Gilbert Girard, Josie Claffin, Bernard Hyllin and many others. They all combine to make the fun come fast and furious. The author, Edgar Selten, has selected each and every one for their fitness for the parts they play. Mr. Selten will be remembered as the author of "McKenna's Flirtations," which had such a phenomenal run, but "A Hot Time," his latest effort, is said to eclipse the other comedy.

"Cumberland, '91," will be produced at the Lafayette next week. It is a new play by Franklin Fyles, set and drawn surroundings. Augustus Pito is given the play a splendid opportunity to show his composed of exceptionally good players of established reputation. At the close of the third act there is a tableau and scene display of a fight for two successive two men upon a mountain peak, which has just been set after. Trees overhanging the roadway running to the top of the both sides of the valley and can be seen apparently miles away. Everything is lit up by a kind glare which is wonderfully weird and impressive, still a falling dramatic effects. The scenes in the other acts are in keeping—a church in the Kentucky mountains ruined by shot and shell, a fine old southern mansion and the parade ground of West Point. The cast comprises such well-known names as C. C. Drake, John E. Keller, W. J. Kerrigan, Frank Loebe, Edgar L. Davenport, Lionel Barrymore and Amelia Summerville.

At the Grand next week the patrons of this theater will see "McCarthy's Misadventures," rewritten and reconstructed, with a new cast, and a new plot. It is a comedy, and is said to be the funniest face comedy on the stage, interspersed with specialties which have a comedy and a plot of the play. A company of clever people have been engaged, among whom are mentioned the well-known Sadie Woodruff, Murphy and Mack, James W. Keegan, Lew Spencer, the dialect comedian, who has not been seen here for many years; Harry Norman, the burlesque singer; Charles Martin, the pleasing soprano; Tillie Ryan, and others. Latest musical gems will be introduced, and the many scenes heralded as an up-to-date farce comedy producer, and the patrons of the Grand may expect that they will be royally entertained during Christmas week.

Godthall's Celebrities will be the feature at the Bijou next week. The show is headed by the German couple, who make his low to the Bijou's patrons. This comedienne is so well known that it is needless to comment upon his abilities, except to say he will be welcomed by his many friends in this city. Others are Collins and Daly, John McCarthy, Nellie McCarthy, Elsie Eastman, Mary Young, Ida Howells, and Clark Gibbs and Lew Simmons.

Next week Devere and his company will be at the Lyceum for their annual visit. Devere himself is, of course, at the head of the organization, and the show is said to be even better than ever before. The program includes a variety of the very best acts and a new feature, the "Devere, entitled "Peep-O'-Day Club," with Mildred Howard Devere in her sensational dance. In the olio are John and Jean, musical comedians; the Glessandros, musical clowns; Prof. Parker, after a seven-years' engagement in Europe; Leonard and Bernard, original entertainers; and the comedy barbershop quartet, Catheryn Rowe, Palmer, contortion dancer; Byron and Langdon, Pearl Haight and Walter J. Talbot, the California twins.

PASSION PLAY IN THIS CITY.

Exact Presentation of the Famous Performance at Columbia Theater.

An unusually interesting, impressive and instructive exhibition will be given at the Columbia Theater all next week—in the evenings at 8:15 and on Thursday and Saturday afternoons at 3 o'clock. It will be "The Passion Play," exactly as presented at Horitz, a picturesque village, near Bayreuth, high up in the Bohemian woods, called the Austrian Ober-Ammergau. The splendor of all the world's tragedies will be reproduced by the aid of Lumiere's enlarged and perfected cinematograph, or "moving picture" device, put according to the plan of the Bayreuth festival, and certainly its most noble work. It was the ambition of Lumiere and his fellow-inventors to secure these pictures, and it is said that much of the inspiration that led to this wonderful invention was due to that ambition. But for the sake of the world and others, and it remained for Dr. W. W. Freeman, the director of the present enterprise, which he did after living for nearly a year and a half among these devout peasants, who, by the advice of their spiritual leaders, gave a special performance for that purpose. Prof. Ernest Lacy, of Philadelphia, the distinguished scholar, educator and litterateur, will come to Washington especially to deliver a descriptive lecture, and a well-known organist will give a special performance for that purpose. For the latter purpose a large pipe organ is now being erected on the stage of the Columbia. There is promise that a distinguished audience, including many clergymen, will be present Monday night.

QUIET ON THE BELT LINE

Employees Were Paid for Yesterday's Work Today.

Local Talent Tender Their Services for a Benefit—Most Needy Employees Cared For.

Everything was working as smoothly as could be expected on the Belt Line this morning. According to the agreement reached yesterday between the employees and Receiver Schoepf, the men were to be paid today for the work they did yesterday. The impression went out that the men would be paid this morning before they went to work. This, however, was not expected by the employees, for it was known that the payroll would not be complete until about August. Under these circumstances the men went to work.

In speaking of the situation this morning Mr. Ballinger, the superintendent of the stables at Florida avenue and Eleventh street, said that he was talking the situation over with Receiver Schoepf yesterday the men seemed satisfied and went to work willingly. He also spoke in the highest terms of the conduct of the men, who, under the trying circumstances, with one or two exceptions behaved well. The refunding of the collateral deposited by many of the conductors and drivers when they entered into the employment of the Belt Company went a great way toward relieving their wants, and this, together with the fact that the men were not paid daily for their work, caused general satisfaction. A good deal of charity work is also being done in a quiet way, and the families most in need are being looked after. The management of the Belt Company is doing all in its power to relieve the situation of the men, and it is hoped that the situation will be relieved in a few days.

The committee has already received offers from several local musical organizations, tendering their assistance. Mr. Church, leader of the Mount Pleasant Field Band, has offered the services of that organization, and it is hoped that the influence to secure the use of a hall or of cost. In case, however, Mr. Schoepf does not succeed in this, the committee has partially decided to hold the entertainment in Center Market Hall, on the corner of 11th and F streets, N.W. This matter will probably be determined on at a meeting of the committee, which will be held this afternoon.

INSANE MAN BOILED TO DEATH

William Spearling, of Boston, Given a Bath in Scalding Water.

Medford, Mass., Dec. 18.—William W. Spearling, of No. 484 Tremont street, Boston, was a helpless inmate of the State Insane Asylum up to November 30, when he was given a special bath by the prison guard. The bath was given by the prison guard, and it was said that the man was boiled to death. The man was given a special bath by the prison guard, and it was said that the man was boiled to death.

When the water was about three inches deep Hill ordered Spearling to get into the tub, and was observed. The water, which was at the boiling point, continued to flow until the insane man's legs and a part of his body were immersed.

The high temperature of the water was at first noticed by Hill. Realizing that his patient was in danger, he called for help. Another nurse responded, and the basted patient was placed in a bed. He had lost all sense of feeling, and although physicians did all in their power for Spearling, he died in a few hours.

Hill was discharged, Medical Examiner McInnis signed a certificate giving the cause of Spearling's death as "shock from burns." No report of the case was made to the district attorney or clerk of the superior court of Norfolk county, as is usual in all such cases. Efforts to reveal the secret of the boiling to death of the patient Spearling were successful last night.
